Tanklager ("tank farm" in German) is a typeface inspired by a weird hand-painted sign found on the side of an oil tank in Visp, Switzerland. Tanklager made its debut in the 9th issue of a review called Jef Klak, which was dedicated to ingestion and digestion.

Its type design is a mixture of DIN and grotesk features, where capital and lowercase letters sometimes have different structures.

Some shapes are blatantly recycled, like the f and the t; sometimes there aren't enough optical corrections and sometimes they are pushed too hard, like in the X or in the letter apexes. The diacritics are very geometrical and they're having a blast.

The typeface comes in two cuts: Original (its width is similar to that of the original sign) and Kompakt (for more effective titles). The category is: all the dirty tricks at once.

In Svizzera gli autocarri non possono circolare di notte e di domenica. Il divieto di circolare di notte vale dalle ore 22 alle ore 5, mentre il divieto di circolare la domenica vale non solo tutte le domeniche, ma anche i seguenti giorni festivi: Capodanno, Venerdì Santo, Lunedì di Pasqua, Ascensione, Lunedì di Pentecoste, 1° agosto, Natale e 26 dicembre. Se in un Cantone, o in una parte di esso, una di queste festività non è osservata, il divieto di circolazione non è applicabile in tale territorio.

Il divieto di circolazione di notte e di domenica si applica a tutti gli autoveicoli con un peso totale autorizzato superiore a 3,5 tonnellate, agli autoarticolati con un peso totale autorizzato del convoglio superiore a 5 tonnellate e ai veicoli che trainano un rimorchio con un peso totale autorizzato superiore a 3,5 tonnellate.
